

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

An apparatus for sensing and controlling remote load voltages, the apparatus includes a power converter, a plurality of remote loads, each remote load located in a loop connected to the power converter, and a feed back loop connected to the power converter, and physically adjacent to the power converter, wherein the feed back loop further comprises a first path and a second path, with the first path and the second path in parallel.